Throughout the week the tendency of wheat prices was generally downward could not of course be more than partially explained by the transactions grain. These reflected, undoubtedly, and markets in previous weeks, the favorwhich almost without exception were extremely favorable. Maturity of the wheat crops was favored by ideal weather throughout the week, and from no sections did there come a single alarmist report of damage by blight or insect.

Favorable for Harvesting.

The weather was as favorable for the harvesting and thrashing of the winter wheat crop as it was propitious for the growth of spring wheat. In the previous week harvesting had been delayed by been retarded or actually stopped by the damage from the floods repaired rallroads moved the new wheat into market with increased rapidity, and it was conpredicted at the close of the week that the new crop would be moved with extreme rapidity in the week to

In this connection it should be observed that notwithstanding a decline of 111-4 cents in the price of July wheat last week, farmers, who are, of course, the best judges of yield and crop prospects in their particular localities, are everywhere selling the newly harvested wheat as promptly as possible, and are seemingly anxious to take advantage of prices which are now but a few cents over a dollar a bushel. The reports of corn, barley, oats, and other crops were generally favorable, although in the corn market there was no such decline in

The prospects for a large yield of cotton improved greatly after a wide and sufficient rainfall, which relleved the Texas crop of about a third of this year's total of damage threatened by long continued drought. Human misery increases as ras contained in reports gathered by the wealth augments and wages are lowered. while the powers of production increase, because land, which is the source of all wealth and opportunity for all labor is monopolized. To abolish poverty and alleviate human misery and make wages the full earnings of labor, we must place all taxation upon the value of land, irrespective of improvements, and thus render it unprofitable to withhold land from use in anticipation of future increase. The value which attaches to land is due to the growth of the community, the Carolina and Gulf State "anarchists," therefore the community should take it for public purposes and leave to the individual all that his labor produces.
